

A peek into good Doggos or how I stopped worrying and started loving Doggos

I came across the twitter handle @dog_rates recently (yes I know I wish I had known it earlier) and discovered the best doggos in the world. There was a rating associated with most of their posts for all the lovely pictures they had posted and this was highly popular twitter handle.

This seemed like an opportunity to delve deep into some interesting information like what type of dogs were the most popular, what's the most popular dog names and all sorts of information. My dog's name is Pluto and I really thought that would hands down be the most popular name. Read on for some more surprises.

Disclaimer regarding the datasource: Our good friends at the @dog_rates were kind enough to provide us with a set of archived data. We downloaded some information from twitter. We also ran the pictures from these tweets through an image neural net to recognize the dog breeds. The below analysis is based on the data merged from all these sets.

The highest rated dog breed as per our friends at @dog_rates was.....Saluki. You have to admit they look really elegant if you had to describe in one word.

However, when we looked at the dog breed who scored the lowest rating, surprisingly it was.....Japanese Spaniel. Still good boys I am sure :)

Looking at the twitter data for Retweets and Favorites, we could now look at what most of the people said it. Could they have a different opinion?

Breed of Dogs whose tweets were re-tweeted the most was Bedlington Terrier (they are really cute) and favorited the most was Saluki. So i guess our friends did get the ratings right in one way.

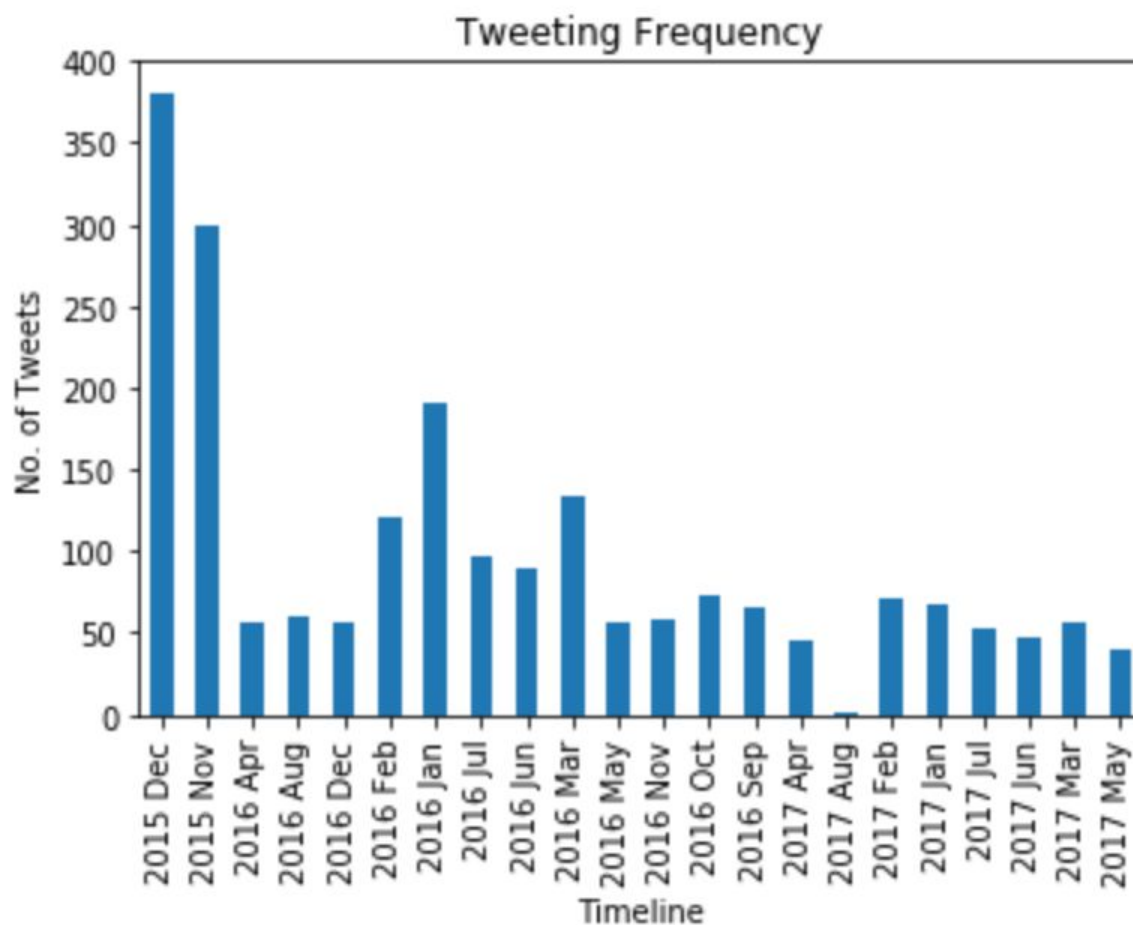

Now coming to the question that I was looking for the most - which dog name is the most popular - and.....it was not Pluto :(It turned out it is Charlie and Lucy followed closely by Cooper and Oliver.

We had data for dog stages as in is it a doggo, floofer, pupper or a puppo - and thought it was not very complete information. Based on the data it seems the most favorited dog stage is a tie with Doggo and Puppo.

We also delved into see which breed of dog was most tweeted about. Below is spread showing the details for the top 10 breeds (there are a lot of breeds). Golden Retrievers have the highest number of tweets.

We also looked at how often did our friends at @dogs_rate tweet from the available dataset. Seems they started off with a bang but have been consistently churning out those ratings ever since.

Thank you for reading. I have spent way too much time scrolling through @dog_rates than working on this analysis. A huge thanks to them for providing the data. Keep safe.